—:O:—

1830.

TO PRINTERS.

IN presenting this Book of Specimens to you, the subscribers are aware that it exhibits many imperfections and defects, which they trust will find some excuse in the fact, that the establishment is not yet one year old.

It is hoped the variety here exhibited, both of Job and Book Letter, will be found to possess some claims to patronage.

Having been among the earliest advocates of a light face for book work, no heavy-faced letter, except for Jobbing, has been introduced. It is hoped, that, for newspapers, the Bourgeois, Brevier, Minion, and Nonpareil, herein offered, will not be found inferior to any heretofore exhibited.

Every exertion will be made, to keep pace with the improvements of the age, so far as these may affect their business, in all things useful and advantageous.

Such as it is, the book is now before you, and we have only to add our grateful acknowledgments for favors received, and to solicit a share of your patronage.

No. 1.

WHO hath believed our report? and to whom is the arm of the LORD revealed?

2 For he shall grow up before him as a tender plant, and as a root out of a dry ground: he hath no form nor comeliness; and when we shall see him, there is no beauty that we should desire him.

3 He is despised and rejected of men: a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief: and we hid as it were our faces from him; he was despised and we esteemed him not.

4 Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows; yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God and afflicted.

5 But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed.

Come, gentle Spring! ethereal Mildness! come;
And from the bosom of yon dropping cloud,
While music wakes around, veil'd in a shower
Of shadowing roses, on our plains descend.

O Hertford! fitted or to shine in courts
With unaffected grace, or walk the plain
With innocence and meditation join'd.
In soft assemblage, listen to my song,
Which thy own Season paints; when Nature all
Is blooming and benevolent, like thee.

And see where surly Winter passes off,
Far to the north and calls his ruffian blasts;

Almighty! thine this universal frame,
Thus wondrous fair, thyself how wondrous then!
Unspeakable! who sitt'st above these heav'ns,

In these thy lowliest works, yet these declare,
Thy goodness beyond thought, and power divine,
Speak ye, who best can tell, ye sons of light,

And choral symphonies, day without night,

Few men, my friends, suspect, perhaps no man comprehends the extent of the support given by religion to every virtue. No man, perhaps, is aware, how much our moral and social sentiments are fed from this fountain; how powerless conscience would become, without the belief of a God; how palsied would be human benevolence, were there not the sense of a higher benevolence to quicken and sustain it; how suddenly the whole social fabric would quake, and with what a fearful crash it would sink into hopeless ruin, were the ideas of a Supreme Being, of accountableness, and of a future life, to be utterly erased from every mind. Once let men thoroughly believe that they are the work and sport of chance; that no superior intelligence concerns itself with human affairs; that all their improvements perish forever at death; that the weak have no guardian, and the injured no avenger; that there is no recompense for sacrifices to uprightness and the public good; that an oath is unheard in heaven; that secret crimes have no witness but the perpetrator; that human existence has no purpose, and human virtue no unfailing friend; that this brief life is every thing to us, and that death is total, everlasting extinction; once let men thoroughly abandon religion; and who can conceive or describe the extent of the desolation which would follow!

FORASMUCH then as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind: for he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin:

2 That he no longer should live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men but to the will of God.

3 For the time past of our life may suffice us to have wrought the will of the Gentiles, when we walked in lasciviousness, lusts, excess of wine, revellings, banquetings, and abominable idolatries:

4 Wherein they think it strange that ye run not with them to the same excess of riot, speaking evil of you.

5 Who shall give account to him that is ready to judge the quick and the dead.

6 For, for this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to God in the spirit.

7 But the end of all things is at hand: be ye therefore sober, and watch unto prayer.

8 And above all things have fervent charity among yourselves: for charity shall cover a multitude of sins.

Of all the discoveries which have been made, we conceive the reflecting mind will admit, that none have tended more to the improvement and comfort of society than that of printing; in truth it would almost be impossible to enumerate the advantages derived by all professions from the streams of this invaluable fountain, this main spring of all our transactions in life. It was justly said by a celebrated writer, that were the starry heavens deficient of one constellation, the vacuum could not be better supplied, than by the introduction of a printing press. The more we reflect, the greater becomes our surprise, till at length we are lost in wonder and astonishment that the art should have lain dormant for so many generations, when the principle was so very well understood. The invention of printing took place in the early part of the 15th century, and it long remained an undetermined point, concerning the place where and the person by whom it was then discovered. The invention of Printing took place in the early part of the 15th century, and it long remained an undetermined point, concerning the place where and the person by whom it was then discovered. The best authorities place the event between the years 1440 and 1450. It was a long controverted question by many learned antiquarians, whether Guttemberg or Faust was the inventor of the art, till happily the original instrument was found, by which it appears, the former only associated the others with him for the sake of their purses, he not being able to proceed without on account of the great expense attending the cutting of blocks of wood, which after they were once printed from became entirely useless for any other work.
